A Letter from our Leadership

Thank you for taking a pause in this challenging time to read about our Center’s activities. We’re proud to share the exciting research of our community and are thankful for all of your efforts.

First, we are excited to share a new visual abstract focused on two translational research youth violence prevention studies, based on the findings from the teams working with Patrick Carter, MD, Maureen Walton PhD, and Jessica Roche. In addition, we’re sharing links to 27 recent articles published by our faculty.

As a reminder, the recordings from our 2nd Annual Virtual Research Symposium can be viewed here.

We hope you will enroll in our free training to learn the latest science and practices in injury prevention and take advantage of the free CME, MOC Part II, and CHES credits available with our massive open online course. Please alert your students to view the recordings from our recent symposium, recommend they enroll in our free injury prevention MOOC, and pass along this newsletter that links to our membership application. Also, we have shared new U-M IPC research recruiter jobs as well as fellowship opportunities posted by U-M Institute for Firearm Injury Prevention.

We thank you all for your commitment to injury prevention science and look forward to continuing our partnership in 2022. Thank you to our large group of...
From our team to you, happy holidays and a joyous new year.
